The Charter Convention.

The most difficult task of this body is over—the adoption of the police system. Something over a month ago the executive police committee, after due consideration, made a report, and night after night for weeks, it was debated, and at last nearly the whole report was recommended with such useful suggestions as the debate brought to light. In a very short time the committee again brought in a report which won the favorable opinion of the whole convention, and passed in a single night with scarcely a dissenting voice.

The bill as adopted, in brief, provides:

That the judges of the City Court, and the County Court, and the Court of Common Pleas, any two of whom may act, shall appoint next January one good citizen from each legislative district in the city as a Police Commissioner, to serve a year without pay, these commissioners to have the power of appointment in all cases.

The qualifications of policemen are: That he is twenty-four years of age, moral, sagacious and sober, and has resided in the city three years preceding his election.

The duties of the police are to be the same as those under the present system.

The report exhibits great study, and is probably the best one that could be devised. The board of Commissioners bear the same relation to the Mayor that the Senate did to the President before the tenure-of-office set. The idea of an absolute power of removal in the Mayor is entirely proper, the Commissioners possessing upon the property of the removal what they fill the vacancy.

Effects of a Gale—are They Political Omens?
During the storm Saturday evening, in Evansville, the lightning struck a Seymour Blair home in the city, shattering it from the top to the bottom, when it melted the iron bands and let the upper part of the pole down. Great and his horse were blown from the top of the pole two hundred and one feet high, and alighted with but little damage in the upper story of a gorg shop across the street, having passed into the window. Ten or twelve feet of the top of the pole was blown off. The chandeliers were blown from the tops of several Democratic poles.

The association and the public are greatly indebted to this gentleman for the most efficient manner in which he has discharged the duties of Marshal in the upper part of the amphitheater. What dreams they had not had of fields of the cloth of gold, of mailed warriors, of steel helmets, the amphitheater.

ing Too Much—Will Not the People Observe?

We have spoken of the terrible fury with which the Radicals received the expulsion of those twenty-five negroes from the Georgia Legislature—by the act of a Legislature created by the Radical wing of Congress, and the steps to which exclusion were consented to by the negroes themselves. The Radicals, we have quoted from Greeley and others, denounce that action in bitter and malignant terms; but what they propose to do about it, is a subject bearing directly upon the issues of the Presidential campaign upon us.

On yesterday we threw off hurriedly some suggestions as to the plain philosophy of Radical rule; that this philosophy pointed unmistakably to the practical or utter abolition of States as the consequence of their success in getting a renewed lease upon the Government's machinery.

We affirmed, Georgia as a practical evidence, that, as the system of states was the part of their genius in getting, so they could not use the self-governing machinery of States for their purposes.

State Governments, have the Radicals, fought against, from the birth of our great Union. They evidenced their aversion to that system, to the federative system, all during the war; they demonstrated it, after the war, by keeping men in military subjugation because of the near approach of a Presidential election!

They necessarily compelled, or threatened to compel, the South to give up its right to self-government, and to regard for the votes of some Southern States, and after so organizing those States as to appearly render their votes secure, they were recognized as States by the admission of Representatives in Congress. The action of Georgia and he in the Radicals, signally show that the Democratic republican system of States is foreign to the philosophy of Radicalism, and that Radicalism cannot use machinery, to which it is intrinsically hostile, for its purposes.

And now, we have in advance, before the Presidential election, a time for all the people of all sections of the country to be told, what the Radicals will do.

The success of Grant would be a virtual abolishment of States, from the necessities of the party, as founded by its genius and history. We are sustained in this conviction by the following indications of the usual indirect, Puritanical mode by which such a result will be brought about by such conservative Radical papers as the New York Times.

In speaking of this very Georgia case, the Times of the 11th says: "What, then, can Congress do? May not the Senate and House in turn assert their supreme control over elections and qualifications, and respectively refuse to admit the Senators and Representatives whom Georgia will send to the next session?"

The inquiry is not extravagant, in view of the fact that Georgia regarded its pro-slavery compact as nullified by ratifying the Fourteenth Amendment, which without that vote would still be law.

The act of ratification, however, in the Georgia House, was carried by the votes of the colored members who have been expelled as ineligible. If they had no lawful title to seats they could have none to votes; and after striking off the motion to ratify becomes a fallacy.

Interpreting the action of the Legislature in respect of the amendment in the light of its recent proceeding, no special pleading would seem necessary to justify this conclusion.

If ratification was really not such, admission obtained in reliance upon it was in fact admission by false pretenses;

and Congress may vindicate its integrity and punish the fraud by refusing to receive the Georgia Senators and Representatives. That step would virtually be a declaration that the reconstruction of the State is still incomplete."

The Times asks a question which can be readily answered. The Senate and House may, and will do, if successful in this election, what the Times suggests. It can demand Georgia and all the other States back into provinces as righteously as they held them as such for three years; and on no other principle. Congress can assert its supreme control over elections and qualifications, and everything else—grant as President, and conclude, and it probably will! in such an event would Grant fight for his Constitutional prerogatives? Fight against the very men who elected him? He would be in a worse position for such a fight than was Johnson, and with less loss.

The high devilment of the party was sustained by Stevens in his lifetime, and is sustained by the Tribune now. The hypocrisy and fraudulent approaches to the same ends are well represented by the Times. It shows how easily Congress can get rid of Georgia as a State. To call its plan "thimbering," would be nothing to the strength of our argument to the intelligence of the people! Let them read and ponder over the foregoing sentences of the Times. Its pettifoggings about the Fourteenth Amendment, which did require Georgia for its proclamation of ratification, if Ohio and New Jersey had the right to recede, and which right of revocation the Times distinctly repudiates in its assertion that it would still be a law without Georgia, is characteristic of the Sewardish duplicity which distinguishes the Times. We may repeat to the subject.

By Telegraph to the Democrat. Difference of Longitude Between Washington and Havana.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The difference of longitude between Washington and Havana, as demonstrated by recent computations, for that purpose, is 10° 4' 40". The time occupied in the passage of electricity between the two cities is 35-100 of a second.

None of the crew of the lost ship Fronde were natives of the United States.

Official Report of the Earthquake.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Master O. H. Weller, of the U. S. Surveyor of Waterways, arrived this morning as bearer of dispatches from Admiral Turner, giving the details of the late earthquake on the coast of South America, most of which have been published.

Mr. White left Arctic on the 16th of August.

The report includes others from Commander Gillis, of the Waterways, and Captain of the Fredonia, Commander of the survey force, on shore at twenty minutes past seven in the evening. But one of the crew is known to have perished, those seven having been ashore to render assistance and not having returned. The crew of the Waterways, however, had been ashore to render assistance, but as there is a continued recurrence of shocks and the Peruvian corvette, America, lies broadside almost directly in their path, the Waterways would be crushed, precautions are taken to remove the sailors and crew on shore to the extent of safety. The report is due to be issued on the 1st of October.
